NATURE AND NURTURE.

The long-standing controversy as o the relative importance of nature and nurture, to use Galton's "con-venient fingle of words," is drawing to an end, and of the overwhelmingly greater significance of nature the e no longer any possibility of doubt. It may be well briefly to recapitulate the arguments on which naturalists rely in coming to this decision as regards both races and individuals. First, as regards human individuals, there is the common experience that children of the same parents reared under conditions sensibly identical may develop quite differently, exhibiting in character and apitudes a segregation just as great as in their colors or hair-forms. Conversely, all the more marked apitudes have at various times appeared and not rarely reached perfection in circumstances the least favorable for their development. Next, appeal can be made to the universal experience of the universal experience of the universal experience of the threads the food you can be desired to convert them by the discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements of relember of the very elements of the same parents reared them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams." or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

The theme last night in the First Presbyterian church was the lessons of the "Rise of the House of Hohen-593 zollern."

Rev. Carver said in part: "The older instruction concerning 837 kings and rulers, as found in the Book of Deuteronomy, is characteristic of Moses. "Hohenzollern," says Carlyle, "lies far south in Suabla, near the Alps. 1.168 a little north of Lake Constance and 499 close to the source of the Danube 129 The name means 'place of tolls,' and it is supposed that travelers coming out of Italy and Switzerland there had to 2,583 pay toll before they could pass to Germany. It was about 1160 when Conrad, a younger member of Redd Hohenzollern family, set out to join the forces of Frederic Barbarossa. He could find no better teacher than this 1,003 great ruler who was a power in most 298 all of Europe. His estates were productive and as the Hohenzollerns were ever a thrifty folk, they acquired much fortune. The House of the Hohenzollerns is unique, not for its great age, but for the length of continuous reign. Without interruption or even dispute, it has ruled from the early part of the fifteenth century

Frederic the Second made the position firm. He was a man of iron will. He slezed by force a square in Ber-I'n and on it erected the first Schloss on the Spree. He was a great warrior in his day. His crowning act was the establishment of the law of primogeniture and was the first ruler to formally declare it. His son John, who followed his rule, was also a man of strong will. He procured from his people a grant of an excise on beer, the earliest tax of that kind on record. Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

guished Specialist.

"Acid' stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and infiames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of blaurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained in Ogden from A. R.
